Manarola is just after Riomaggiore and is the second village of Cinque Terre (meaning "five villages"). It is less known than Riomaggiore and more protected by nature, since is surrounded by high cliffs. Manarola is set on the steep slopes, enclosed by rocks that embrace it as if it were a precious pearl inside its shell.

Manarola, like the other villages, features brightly coloured, narrow houses, tower-looking buildings, that border vineyards and stretch along the main village street. From here very narrow country roads paved with stone lead to the houses and to places from where you can admire a breath-taking view of the sea, and where you can find cosy and friendly restaurants and enjoy the typical Italian "aperitivo".
